

right on for another two miles along the banks of the Lehigh.

The works are more than three miles long. Rolling mills, furnaces, coke plants, boiler houses, foundries with cupola buildings three and four stories high, and now near the new bridge a new building is being put up just for shell making.

Already Schwab has bought a row of five houses near the company's main gate. A year and a half ago you could buy the property for $5,000 and $6,000. Schwab paid the owners $25,000 and $27,000 a piece. And he is after more. Eventually he'll take all Third st., if he can get it.

And South Bethlehem guesses he can, for, as they know him, he's a man nothing can feaze. He gets what he goes after.

REV. HILLIS TELLS HOW WEALTH AMBITION CRUSHED LIFE

New York, Sept. 20.—The Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, successor to Henry Ward Beecher and Dr. Lyman Abbott in Plymouth church, Brooklyn, author of religious books and Chautauqua lecturer, in an address to his congregation yesterday told them that his ambitions for wealth and power had crushed his life and brought him to the brink of poverty.

Dr. Hillis, about whose speculations there has been considerable rumor for some months, said that ten years ago, under the influence of what he believed to be his duty, he endeavored to make provision for the future of his family and to give certain young men a start in life and that he had invested a sum of money he had accumulated as lecturer and writer. These speculations he declared had turned out disastrous, leaving him only sufficient to pay off his indebtedness.

"For several years I have been increasingly disturbed lest the little influence I may have had upon some students and young ministers was far from my ideal," he declared in a voice that broke with emotion. "I have feared lest I was biasing these young men toward the lecture platform, public life and prosperity, instead of toward obscure, gentle, tender Christian service.

"To these young men I owe this statement, that often I have loved my books more than the poor, have loved position and office and honor and sometimes have thought of my own interests, when every drop of my blood and every ounce of my strength and every thought of my mind belonged to our schools, to the sick, the friendless, the poor, and to the boys and girls with their eager and hungry minds.

"For years I have had a growing conviction that a minister has no right to make money and does his best work without it."

Dr. Hillis spent many years in Chicago. He was educated at Lake Forest College and the McCormick Seminary and in 1890 was pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Evanston. He was called to Brooklyn in 1893. Plymouth church congregation will stand by him.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS

All food should be kept under covers.

Wet cloths should cover fish and meat till they can be dressed.

To overcome hoarseness dash cold water on the outside of the throat several times a day. Gargle the throat with cold salt water.

To overcome the itching of hives, bathe the parts affected with vinegar and water and sprinkle with soda.

Paste pieces of velvet, soft side up, into the heels of your shoes, bottom and back, and you will find your stocking darning reduced by a big per cent.

Teach the boys to sew on buttons.
